If you've turned on a radio or television during the past 40 years, chances are you've heard ROBERT MONTAGUE.

Montague caught the radio fever after working with the legendary "Wolfman Jack" at XERF-AM in Mexico. This experience (and friendship) altered his life forever.

After moving to southern California, he honed his techniques with over 200 celebrity interviews, national spokesperson roles for major auto companies, books on audio and on-air promotional projects, a major motion picture, and an onstage stint as a circus ringmaster.

Today, Montague teaches at the Connecticut School of Broadcasting, in addition to hosting a call-in music program dedicated to 70's disco music. He's also a news anchor with Time Warner Television, where he demonstrates his mastery of Final Cut Pro and high def equipment in addition to writing, editing and producing daily stories. In radio, his expertise is with Network Radio Automation Software (ENCO, R-C-S) and Rapid Editing Systems (VOX Machine) software.
